WELCOME TO METRO.US!

LENYON WHITAKER, MULTIMEDIA EDITOR

On Thursday, the Trump administration held a press briefing to introduce their tax-cutting budget plan, titled "MAGAnomics," and the internet had a field day turning it into a meme. Photoshop-savvy people of the World Wide Web had their own "unified theme" about everything the Trump Administration is doing and proved it as soon as the photos were released to the public. metro.us/president-trump

REPUBLICAN STRATEGY ON HEALTHCARE BILL IN FLUX

Republican Senate leaders aim to hold a procedural vote as early as Tuesday to take up legislation to repeal or replace Obamacare, but it remained unclear which version of the bill senators would vote on. President Donald Trump and congressional Republicans campaigned on a pledge to roll back former President Barack Obama's signature healthcare law, the 2010 Affordable Care Act, also known as Obamacare. Senator John Thune, a member of the Republican leadership, told "Fox News Sunday" the initial vote was simply a way to open debate on the bill so that senators from both parties could offer amendments.

DEATH TOLL IN HUMAN SMUGGLING CASE RISES

2 At least nine men were found dead alongside dozens of people discovered inside a sweltering tractor trailer parked at a Walmart store in San Antonio, Texas, in what authorities called a case of "ruthless" human trafficking. Thirty people, many in critical condition and suffering from heat stoke and exhaustion, were removed from the trailer, which lacked air conditioning or a water supply, San Antonio Fire Chief Charles Hood said. Temperatures outside the vehicle topped 100 degrees Fahrenheit.Another person was found in a wooded area nearby and was also being treated, the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Western District of Texas said. All the deceased were adult males, it said. Authorities initially said eight bodies were found in the trailer, but the U.S. Attorney's Office statement later said the death toll had risen to nine.

CRACKDOWN PROMISED ON MEDIA LEAKS

4 Anthony Scaramucci, President Donald Trump's new communications director, said on Sunday that one of his first tasks will be to halt leaks and that staff on his team would be fired if the leaks do not stop. "If we don't get the leaks stopped, I am a businessperson, and so I will take dramatic action to stop those leaks," Scaramucci said on "Fox News Sunday." Scaramucci told CBS's "Face the Nation" that leakers are "actually un-American," and that he would lead a team meeting on Monday. The hiring of Scaramucci brings a combative style to the White House press office as President Donald Trump lashes out at probes into whether his campaign colluded with Russians during the 2016 campaign.

ARMY SERGEANT CHARGED WITH TRYING TO HELP ISIS

5 A U.S. Army sergeant stationed in Hawaii has been indicted on charges of trying to provide material support to Islamic State, allowing the case to move to a federal trial without a preliminary hearing, officials said. Ikaika Erik Kang, 34, is being held in jail and is scheduled to appear in court in Honolulu on Monday to face charges. He was arrested on July 8. The indictment, from a U.S. grand jury, accuses the military air traffic controller of four counts of attempting to provide material support or resources to a "foreign terrorist organization." Islamic State, a militant group that has claimed responsibility for suicide bombings and other attacks on civilians around the world, controls territory in Syria and Iraq. Earlier this month, Iraq's prime minister declared victory in a battle to drive Islamic State out of the city of Mosul.

WHAT'S HAPPENING TODAY: KUSHNER TO SPEAK TO SENATE INTELLIGENCE PANEL ON RUSSIA PROBE

President Donald Trump's son-in-law and senior adviser, Jared Kushner, will be interviewed by staff of the Senate Intelligence Committee in a closed session on Monday. According to The Washington Post, Kushner is expected to answer the committee's questions and not invoke his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, according to a person familiar with Kushner's thinking.

Our Goal is Zero.

Kosciuszko Bridge wolves honor historic structure

The group of "wolf warriors" marched to the bridge "in an unbroken chain of amazing strength" to honor the soon-to-be dismantled 1939 structure.

The wolves and warriors who aimed to defend the Kosciuszko Bridge from its uncertain death may not be able to save the bridge, but they did take to the nearby streets in a "procession to honor and glorify" the bridge on Saturday.

The 78-year-old structure was replaced in April by the first phase of the new Kosciuszko Bridge. The original is set for demolition sometime this summer, and in its defense, Brian Hersey created a cheeky Facebook event that has since gone viral.

At first, they aimed to defend the bridge on its scheduled demolition date, July 11, with "swords and wolves" (both of which are illegal in New York, by the way). But with the dismantling of the historic bridge delayed, on Saturday they gathered in its shadow to honor it with a march.

The wolf warriors gathered at 37th Street and Review Avenue, and marched along the base of the First Calvary Cemetery "in an unbroken chain of amazing strength" to Laurel Hill Boulevard. After approaching both bridges, they tried to smash the new bridge with the power of spirit. The bridge defenders "let out a war cry, and unleash a flurry of curses upon the new bridge, so that it may fall into the waters through sadness," as Hersey described it.

Nonetheless, the new Kosciuszko continued standing, and the old bridge will not last. An official demolition date is not set for the bridge, but it won't be blown up. It will actually be dismantled and lowered onto a barge before being taken to a recycling facility in New Jersey. So realistically, Saturday's procession was "not a victory march so much as maybe a 'demonstration of willingness,'" as Hersey told Metro.

The historic bridge's designers might have been surprised to discover that in 2017, the bridge would find such passionate defenders.

> "It has become an iconic part of the skyline, so there is that aspect of old New York going away."
> Brian Hersey

"Nobody was really speaking up for the old bridge. I thought there were two sides," Hersey previously told Metro about the inspiration for defending the bridge. "It has become an iconic part of the skyline, so there is that aspect of old New York going away."

RUSSIA SANCTIONS

White House says open to legislation toughening Russia sanctions

The White House said on Sunday it was open to legislation toughening sanctions on Russia as momentum increased in the U.S. Congress for stronger action against Moscow.

Two U.S. senators said they believe the legislation that allows for new sanctions against Russia would pass with enough votes to override a presidential veto.

Republicans and Democrats reached agreement allowing new sanctions targeting Russia, Iran and North Korea in a bill that would limit any potential effort by Trump to try to lift sanctions against Moscow.

"We support where the legislation is now and will continue working with the House and Senate to put those tough sanctions in place on Russia until the situation in Ukraine is fully resolved," White House press secretary Sarah Sanders told ABC's "This Week with George Stephanopoulos" program.

Many lawmakers hope the bill will send a message to Trump to keep a strong line against Russia.

"I think [it] will pass probably overwhelmingly again in the Senate and with a veto-proof majority," Sen. John Thune, a member of the Republican leadership, said on "Fox News Sunday."

Sen. Ben Cardin, the top Democrat on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the bill has "broad support in the Senate and in the House."

"If [Trump] vetoes the bill, we will override the veto," Cardin said.

Anthony Scaramucci, Trump's new communications director, said Trump has not yet decided whether he would sign the sanctions bill. REUTERS

The president can be indicted, newly discovered legal memo says

A conservative constitutional law expert made the argument decades ago, during the investigation into President Clinton.

letters@metro.us

Donald Trump could be indicted while president, according to a recently uncovered memo drafted in 1998. GETTY IMAGES

As the investigation into President Trump and Russia broadens, a question has been raised: If crimes are uncovered, could Trump be indicted? The widespread conclusion is no; a sitting president is immune from prosecution.

But a decades-old legal memo, written by a conservative, says he can.

The memo, recently uncovered by The New York Times, was commissioned by independent counsel Kenneth Starr during the investigation into President Bill Clinton in the '90s. Starr hired a conservative constitutional law and ethics expert, Ronald Rotunda, to write the memo in spring 1998, after a grand jury concluded there was enough evidence to indict Clinton.

"It is proper, constitutional and legal for a federal grand jury to indict a sitting president for serious criminal acts that are not part of, and are contrary to, the president's official duties," the memo reads. "In this country, no one, even President Clinton, is above the law."

Using that argument, the memo also concluded that it was constitutional to try the president even for minor, unimpeachable crimes without waiting for the end of his term, because statutes of limitation for some offenses would run out.

Ironically, the example Rotunda gave was the president punching a heckler at a rally.

> "It is proper, constitutional and legal for a federal grand jury to indict a sitting president for serious criminal acts that are not part of, and are contrary to, the president's official duties."
> Ronald Rotunda's memo

Ultimately, Starr chose to let impeachment hearings go forward instead of recommending indictment.

The Constitution doesn't specifically say that a sitting president can't be prosecuted. The courts haven't ruled on it. But the belief is based on the Constitution's "structural principles" — a trial would prevent the president from fulfilling the constitutional powers of the executive branch. That would result in a crisis of governance, preventing the government from functioning as it's intended.

But Rotunda argued that the 25th Amendment — a guideline to replace the president in case he becomes incapacitated, which has also been mentioned frequently in reference to Trump — was intended to prevent the executive branch from being compromised in that way.

This is not the only time the memo's conclusion has been expressed. In 1974, the special counsel on Watergate received a memo from his staff saying it was possible to indict President Richard Nixon.

In the Trump/Russia investigation, if special counsel Robert Mueller uncovers enough evidence to indict President Trump and wants to empanel a grand jury, he must follow Justice Department procedures to move forward. One of those specifies the person who could overrule him: Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein, who was appointed by Trump.

OPINION

There's a telling exchange in "101 Dalmatians," the late-1990s Disney TV series. It comes in the episode "Bad to the Bone/ Southern Fried Cruella." Mooch, the bully dog, is taunting roly-poly Rolly, when one of Rolly's friends speaks up.

Spot: You know what happens to bullies?

Mooch: Yeah. They get all the good stuff.

I'm not sure if Mooch-the-pooch inspired Anthony Scaramucci, the New York hedge-funder and feisty Trump defender whose nickname he shares. Maybe it was the other way around. Either way, Mooch-the-human has definitely landed on familiar territory as the latest pugnacious mouthpiece for President Donald Trump.

Right away, let's get one thing straight. Scaramucci is not the new White House communications director. He may have the title. He may have the briefing-room microphone. But in this tumultuous White House, only one man directs the communications. He uses his thumbs a lot. His initials are DJT. Everyone else, the Mooch included, just arrived from Office Temporaries.

Judging by his performance on the Sunday shows, Scaramucci thinks Trump is perfect and all complaints are mainstream-media narratives or more fake news. And the Mooch has no intention of dwelling in the past. Shrugging that "past views evolved," he spent the weekend sweeping smoldering stink bombs from his own Twitter account.

There, he was praising Mitt Romney for staying out of the "Trump spectacle." He was declaring his stances "for gay marriage, against the death penalty, and pro-choice," all verboten to the Trump base. He was announcing Jeb Bush "will make a great president" and "I like Hillary. Have to go with the best athlete. We need to turn this around." For good measure, the Mooch even fretted about global warming, backed gun control and said of Trump's biggest promise: "Walls don't work. Never have, never will."

Things don't end so well for Mooch or for Rolly in that "Dalmatians" episode. Rolly joins a gang for protection. Mooch isn't nearly the fighter he pretended to be. And, well, I don't want to blow the ending for you. But before he makes any plans for the distant future, Mooch-the-human might want to go on YouTube and look it up.

Crazed critter attacks parkgoers

A series of attacks has Health Department officials warning visitors about a possibly rabid squirrel in Prospect Park.

AMY RUSSO
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

An attacker is on the loose in Brooklyn's Prospect Park. Having already assaulted five victims, it's clear this furry four-legged rodent is a force to be reckoned with.

The Health Department is warning parkgoers to look out for a highly aggressive and potentially rabid squirrel after several injuries were reported last week.

While it is rare that squirrels would contract rabies, it is assumed that is the cause for the crazed behavior of the tiny culprit that bit several people from July 18 to July 20.

All but one of the victims have been identified by authorities and the fifth individual, who was reportedly attacked while jogging, is still being asked to come forward.

While Brooklynites appear unafraid of the savage squirrel, if it actually had rabies, it is probably dead by now according to health officials, the New York Daily News reported.

However, signs cautioning park visitors have been posted just in case, and locals are on their guard.

"I wouldn't feed it any nuts," vowed one man speaking to CBS2.

Anyone bitten is urged to seek medical attention immediately.

BODY FOUND

Body discovered in Midtown elevator shaft

A man was found dead Sunday morning within the elevator shaft of a Hell's Kitchen high-rise.

The victim, a construction worker at 555 Tenth Avenue, was discovered when emergency services responded to a call just after 7 a.m. for what was thought to be a case of cardiac arrest. The 53-year-old man was pronounced dead at the scene and is believed to have fallen. However, the exact cause of death remains unconfirmed.

The body was located between the elevator and the shaft, and it is believed that it was there overnight.

The building, named 555Ten, sits next to the Lincoln Tunnel and around the corner from the Javits Center. It still under construction and remains unoccupied, but contains mostly luxury apartments, boasting an overall height spanning 650 feet. ABC7 reported that when builders arrived this morning for work, they were prohibited from entering the building. The NYPD is continuing to investigate the death as details are still emerging. LIRR THIRD-TRACK FUNDING REVEALS DIFFICULTIES

History has shown that estimated costs for construction usually trend upward as projects advance during final design.

LARRY PENNER

Analysis

Larry Penner is a transportation historian and advocate who previously worked 31 years for the U.S. Department of Transportation Federal Transit Administration Region 2 NY Office.

There is more to the recent approval of $1.95 billion to support construction of the Long Island Rail Road Main Line Third Track by the Albany Metropolitan Transportation Authority Capital Program Review Board. These funds were part of a $3 billion MTA 2015 — 2019 Five Year Capital Program Amendment, which increased the total budget from $29 to $32 billion. Over the past 30 years, estimates for construction of the Main Line Third Track have grown from $600 million to $1.5 billion two years ago and $2 billion today. The final cost could be even higher when completed in four years. Who will pay for any potential change orders and cost overruns? Not Uncle Sam. Here is why.

The Main Line Third Track Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) was found to be in compliance with the New York State Environmental Quality Review Act (SEQUA). Gov. Andrew Cuomo, the MTA Board and other project supporters never questioned why the National Environmental Protect Action (NEPA) process was not followed. Without the compliance with NEPA, the MTA forfeits any opportunity to access United States Department of Transportation Federal Transit Administration or Federal Highway Administration funding. Gov. Cuomo, the MTA Board, MTA HQ and LIRR senior leadership had no interest in applying for USDOT FTA capital funding for this project. Was it to avoid federal oversight for the project from the environmental review process through construction?

President Donald Trump has proposed a 10-year, trillion-dollar infrastructure program starting with $200 billion in upcoming federal fiscal year 2018. Sen. Chuck Schumer and Democrats would approve even more. This is one program which Democrats and Republicans, city, suburban and transit advocates might agree upon. Why did they decide to miss out on this and other potential federal funding by not following NEPA?

Unfortunately, history has shown that estimated costs for construction usually trend upward as projects advance during final design. Progression of final design refines the detailed scope of work necessary to support construction. The MTA LIRR is using a procurement strategy to hire a design build contractor. They believe that both time and money will be saved by affording the winning bidder responsibility for progression of final design and engineering from 30 percent to 100 percent. Time will tell if this strategy will work.

Problems at Penn Station during Amtrak emergency repairs over several months may pale in comparison to challenges facing LIRR riders whose trains travel the Main Line corridor during construction over coming years.

US Cuba tour operators gird for Trump travel crackdown

President Donald Trump in June rolled back parts of Barack Obama's historic opening to Cuba, saying his predecessor negotiated a "terrible and misguided deal."

U.S. tour operators that send Americans to Cuba are banding together to try to limit damage to business from tighter restrictions on travel to the communist-run island expected in September from the Trump administration.

The revised approach includes stricter enforcement of a longtime ban on Americans going to Cuba as tourists. Among changes are limiting visits to 12 existing categories of non-tourist travel and a ban on the use of hotels and other facilities owned by Cuba's military.

Cruise ships are permitted, the administration said, but not independent visits by solo travelers and families under the popular people-to-people travel category which Trump charged was being used to violate the tourist ban.

Many Americans took Trump's message to mean travel to Cuba, except on cruise ships, was again off limits, U.S. tour operators said. It is a misconception they hope to change with a trade group formed in the last month to influence the debate on Cuba and help would-be visitors navigate new rules.

"We need to share information and speak as a united voice on issues that are important to us," said Cuba Cultural Travel's Michael Sykes, who founded the group American Tour Operators in Cuba (ATOC) that now counts more than 30 U.S. companies.

Trump's move to roll back Obama policies introduced after the 2014 U.S.-Cuban detente has yet to have a significant impact on the number of U.S. travelers visiting the island, according to a survey of a dozen U.S. tour operators by Reuters.

But travel companies fear a hit on future demand from Trump's combative tone and regulations, with some concerned it could even spook U.S. banks that help them do business

"We can work with the new rules with minimal changes, but a pall has been cast over the business and that has me worried going forward," said Steven Cox, president of Alabama-based tour operator International Expeditions, an ATOC member.

"Many American travelers are not so well informed and believe that travel to Cuba is being shut off and that just isn't true," he added.

Some 300,000 Americans, excluding those of Cuban descent, visited Cuba in the first six months of 2017, more than twice last year's number during the same period, according to the Cuban government. Of those, 40,000 traveled outside organized groups using online booking, tour companies estimated, the majority under the people-to-people category.

"Many American travelers are not so well informed and believe that travel to Cuba is being shut off and that just isn't true."

Why Knee Arthritis Sufferers Of Almost All Ages Are Opting For Newest Medical Procedures Before Surgery . . .

Fraction of the cost, minimal risk and little to no downtime amongst top reasons

By Matt Edgar

America's Health Writer

New York City - Everyone has said it at one time or another. If I had only known about "this" sooner - things would be very different today.

That's what many knee arthritis pain sufferers are saying about this technology and treatment.

"We all know that countless lives are being saved every year because of early detection and better treatment" noted the clinic director at the NY Pain MD in New York City. "The same holds true for treating arthritis pain. I believe we are having so much success at NY Pain MD because of two factors: One is we are using advanced medical technology and treatments a lot of clinics do not use. And second, the word has spread to our community and so many knee arthritis sufferers are coming in sooner. And the earlier we can treat knee arthritis - the better the results. The key to trying to avoid knee replacement surgery is doing the correct treatment as soon as possibly"

What is the "correct treatment?"

"That depends," said the director. "There is no one answer when it comes to medical conditions. Knee arthritis is no different. That's why, if you have knee pain, you should have it evaluated by a doctor who deals with and treats knee pain every day," added the director.

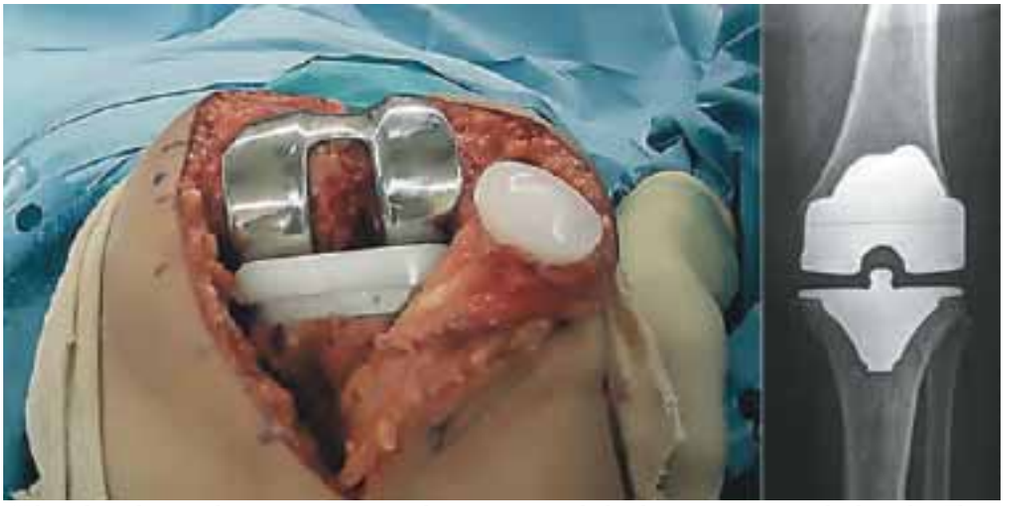
For many knee arthritis pain sufferers the right treatment is Viscosupplementation whereby a preparation of Hyaluronic acid a gel-like FDA approved medicine is applied directly into the knee joint using Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology.

Hyaluronic acid is the natural lubricant and shock absorber of your joints and is found to be decreased in arthritis sufferers. This is similar to running your without oil. Obviously, the sooner you put oil back in the car - the less damage will be done. That's why some doctors feel early viscosupplecosupplementation gets the best results and is so important for avoiding surgery.

The director believes one of the most important factors for the success of viscosupplementation is making sure you are getting it into the joint space precisely. That's why the doctors at NY Pain MD use advanced imaging technology to apply *Precision Arthritis Targetin*g during every treatment.

A device called the "C-Arm" allows the doctor to see into the joint and actually watch the medicine be applied exactly where it is supposed to. Research shows that performing procedures without Precision Arthritis Targeting (P.A.T.T.)can result in missing the joint space as much as 30% of the time. If you had viscosupplementation treatments without Presision Arthritis Targeting Technology and did not get good results - this may be why.



"If you have knee arthritis pain, viscosupplementation might be the answer you are looking for. The keys are not wait, get a good evaluation from an expert and make sure precision arthritis targeting is used to make sure you have the best chance for success."

Can This Be Avoided? Total knee replacement is serious surgery requiring months of rehabilitation. Some doctors think modern treatments done early enough can keep baby boomers from going under the knife.

Normal Pain-Free Knee Joint

Everyone Wants Proof:

In the artist simulated drawings, picture #1 is a normal, pain-free knee. There is no arthritis and the knee can move and bend freely without pain.

Knee With Painful Arthritis

Pain -

Illustration shown is a knee joint with painful xosteo-arthritis. Arthritis causes the joint space to decrease, grinding, stiffness, decreased motion, bone spurs,swelling and a lot of pain.

Research Shows Doctors Miss The Joint Space Up To 30% Of The Time Without Advanced Imaging

Failed Treatment -

The injection (Lubrication medicine) misses the joint space. Research shows this occurs up to 30% of the time without the use of the digital imaging to guide the injection. This is why lubrication medicine may not have worked for you

Modern Doctor's FINALLY Offering These Special Treatments Right Here In New York City

Hundreds of arthritis sufferers from tri state area calling weekly to find out if treatment is right for them.Often covered by insurance.

If you qualify for this treatment, it might be one of the happiest days of your life.

That's because, for the past year and a half, hundreds of knee pain sufferers have flocked to NY Pain MD New York City.

That's when their specially trained-doctors added cutting-edge arthritis treatments to their already successful comphrensive knee pain relief program.

Viscosupplementation is unique because - even-though it is manufactured by a pharmaceutical company, it is NOT considered a drug because it is a natural substance with an incredible story.

Why So Many Want It

You see, when you suffer with arthritis - the lubricating fluid (synovial fluid) in your knee joint dries up.

This means instead of gliding smoothly - your bones start to rub and grind against each other.

This causes a little pain in the beginning - but over time the pain steadily gets worse until it is excruciating.

Like "Joint Oil"

Viscosupplementation works so well because it is like 'joint oil." It is a natural substance that contains one of the natural building blocks of the synovial fluid that lubricates your knee.

Scientists and researchers discovered this natural building block to synovial fluid in the rooster's comb - that big red thing on top of the roosters head. It is extracted from the roosters comb, purified and concentrated. They have also developed medical lubricants that are also natural but made a bit like yogurt and "cultured" into highly effective arthritis pain-fighting medical lubricants.

When introduced directly into your knee joint, it is like squirting oil on a rusty door hinge.

Viscosupplementation allows your joints to glide more smoothly eliminating a lot of the rubbing, grinding and pain.

Can Supplements Do The Same Thing?

No. Glucosamine and chondroitin and other supplements are much different. You can only get this from a doctor and it often helps knee pain sufferers who got limited or no success from glucosamine and chondroitin. Beware of unsubstantiated claims made by supplements to do what this advanced medical procedure does.

Why You Should Try This Even If You've Already Had Similar Treatments Without Results...

"We have been able to help so many knee pain sufferers even many who have already tried other treatments like Synvisc, Supartz, Orthovisc and even Hyalgan. This is because our treating doctors always use "Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology". This allows us to place he Viscosupplementation exactly where is needs to be. Studies show doctors doing joint injections without echnology can miss the joint up to 30% of the time." noted the Director of Center

NY Pain MD is a state of the art medical facility offering nly the best technology.

Advanced Medical Technology Can Make All The Difference: This advanced Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology using fluorososcopic imaging allows doctors to see directly into the knee joint so treatments are precise and the FDA approved lubricating medicine actually goes EXACLTY where it is supposed to. Studies show that procedures done without this technology can miss the joint up to 30% of the time. This is one reason Viscosupplementation may not have worked for you in the past. NY Pain MD uses this P.A.T. Imaging Technology. with each and every treatment.

And that's not all :

"Every case is individual. Some patients get quite a bit of relief right away - others take a little more time. But most have been extremely happy. We've noted results lasting no less than 6 months for many but up to 2 years for some patients.. Patients who were suffering for years with bad knee pain are getting their lives back... going for walks again and exercising. It's amazing to see. They tell all their friends - that's why we are swarmed. After getting treatment and feeling better, many patients have decided to cancel their total knee replacement surgeries." added the director.

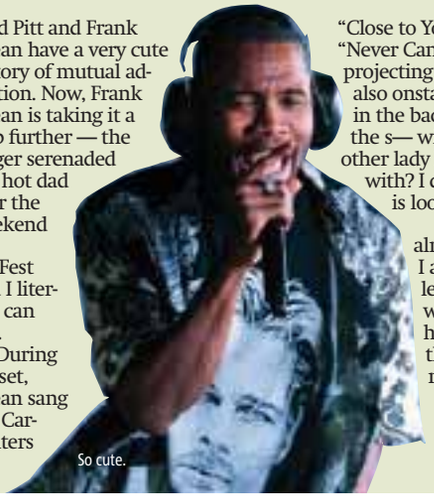
Frank Ocean serenaded Brad Pitt



So cute.

Brad Pitt and Frank Ocean have a very cute history of mutual adoration. Now, Frank Ocean is taking it a step further — the singer serenaded the hot dad over the weekend at Fyf Fest and I literally can not.

During his set, Ocean sang the Carpenters "Close to You" and the Jackson 5's "Never Can Say Goodbye" while projecting a video of Pitt — who was also onstage — talking on the phone in the background. Is he shooting the s— with Sienna Miller, or some other lady he's rumored to be doing it with? I don't know! But damn, Pitt is looking good.

Can these two get a room, already? Please, I'm begging. I am truly living for this celebrity friendship, courtship, whatevership. Here's hoping it fares better than Pitt's marriage to Jolie.

Too soon?

Selena Gomez is 25 now

Happy birthday, I guess.

Selena Gomez — a woman who chooses to make out with The Weeknd on a daily basis — celebrated her 25th birthday over the weekend. Which has me over here wondering the most important question: Selena Gomez is only 25?

The "Fetish" singer celebrated her first quarter of a century with a party that was so low-key and intimate that she just had to document it and share it on Instagram. Duh.

"Thank you for all of my bday love," Gomez wrote in one post. "I couldn't be more blessed."

"A lot of you don't realize how much you mean to me. I. Love. You. –think 25 is going to be epic. xo."

Kind of hate what she's doing with these dashes, but OK!

Anyway, happy belated birthday, Selena. Here's hoping the next 25 years of your life will be way more chill and less full of PDA, for my sake.

William & Harry are still sad about Princess Diana

It'll give you all the feels.

Prince William and Prince Harry are talking about their last moments with their mother, and it's straight-up heartbreaking.

The brothers, who were 15 and 12 when Princess Diana tragically died, remember the last phone call they had with their mother before her death — and why they've been anguishing over the very moment ever since. Oh, dear things.

"As a kid I never enjoyed speaking to my parents on the phone," Harry says. "And we spent far too much time speaking on the phone rather than speaking to each other, because of just the way the situation was.

William adds, "If I'd known now obviously what was going to happen I wouldn't have been so blasé about it and everything else. But that phone call sticks in my mind quite, quite heavily."

Nothing can really describe how I feel about this, except maybe an infinite series of frowning face emojis.

Andy Roddick & Brooklyn Decker are having another baby

C-list celebrities Andy Roddick and Brooklyn Decker — that's not a read, it's just a fact — are expecting a second child.

The former tennis pro spilled the beans that his wife Decker, 30, is pregnant with their second child during an acceptance speech at the International Tennis Hall of Fame Class of 2017 ceremony in Newport, Rhode Island, over the weekend.

"My wife Brooklyn… In a life full of good fortune, being around you has been by far the luckiest part. I'm a better human for us having met 10 years ago." Gross!

"Brook, I don't know how you juggle it all," he continued. "You're the reason why my personal transition into a quasi-normal, everyday life has been gratifying and full. Hank will someday realize how lucky he is. Our daughter that's coming will also realize she has the best mother on earth.

So yeah, they're having a daughter. Just another brave couple willing to raise a child during Trump's reign of terror. It takes guts!

So on trend!

The boys from 'Dunkirk' go to war

Jack Lowden and Fionn Whitehead were just happy to be in the latest from Christopher Nolan.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

In "Dunkirk," Jack Lowden plays an RAF pilot while Fionn Whitehead plays a private trapped on a beach in the north of France. WARNER BROS. PICTURES

War is hell. Making "Dunkirk" wasn't hell, but it was no walk in the park.

The latest from Christopher Nolan is an immersive, intense film about the aftermath of the World War II battle, which ended with 400,000 English soldiers needing to be evacuated from a beach in Northern France. They were surrounded by the German army; home was just across the English Channel. Nolan tries to bottle up that anxiety and fear, and beam it onto an IMAX screen. That required its actors to feel just a little bit of what the soldiers faced 77 years ago.

For Fionn Whitehead — who plays the closest thing "Dunkirk" has to a lead: an anonymous private named Tommy who tries to escape the beach by boat — that meant doing things almost for real, with real boats and real planes and real locations. The hardest part for him was spending so much time in the water.

"We were wearing full battle gear, which was made of wool," Whitehead recalls. Besides being weighed down by a pack, by the heavy military boots that had nails on the soles, there was the cloth itself. "Wool just soaks up the water quickly."

Meanwhile, Jack Lowden had to get in an old-fashioned plane. The actor plays Collins, an RAF pilot who winds up being shot down, then has to be rescued as his aircraft sinks. The tiny, thin planes were good for claustrophobia.

"What amazes you is how little protection they had. It was like sitting in a wheelbarrow with an engine and a sheet of metal wrapped around you," Lowden tells us. And they were noisy. "I don't know how they spoke to each other. It's like a washing machine thousands of feet above ground.

"It's certainly not as glamorous as it looks," he adds.

Not that they're complaining.

"It teaches you not to moan about anything," Lowden says of the experience.

"It was just about getting on with it, really," Whitehead adds. "I was more than happy to be there."

Whitehead is a newbie, and he admits he was starstruck when he first arrived on set. But he found what Lowden found, too: No celebrity acted like one. They were all there to do a job — even Harry Styles, who plays one of the privates.

"There was no divaness, no one wanted special treatment," Whitehead recalls. "It put everyone on a level playing field."

That neither Whitehead nor Lowden are well-known, especially among American audiences, helps the film. It makes their characters blank slates, easier to identify with.

"You're forced to put yourself in the shoes of these young soldiers," Whitehead says. "The way the shots are done means you're practically walking with them."

You never learn anything about any of the soldiers you see — where they're from, where they've been, what battles they've fought before.

"You shouldn't need a backstory with these characters. The moments they're in are so raw and real, there's no need," Whitehead says. "You should just be able to experience it as they did."

Where they come from

"Dunkirk" was Whitehead's first movie. The young English actor's only previous credit was as the lead on the TV miniseries "HIM," about a boy who discovers he has telekinetic powers. Lowden is more experienced, if not as much as some of the bigger names in the cast, which include Tom Hardy, Kenneth Branagh and Mark Rylance. An acclaimed stage actor, Lowden also played Nikolai Rostov in last year's "War and Peace" miniseries, and arrived on the "Dunkirk" set two weeks after playing young Morrissey in the film "England Is Mine."

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

Every summer for 25 years, we've been rewarded for sticking it out within city limits with NYC Restaurant Week. This year's anniversary edition of the dining discount program runs from July 24-Aug. 18 at 390 restaurants across all five boroughs.

For lunch, the deal is a three-course prix-fixe menu for $29, while dinner brings a three-course prix-fixe for $42 (not including drinks, tax and tip). Taking part are 33 new restaurants, from neighborhood favorites to marquee chefs' projects. For all the details and to make reservations, visit nycgo.com. For your best bets for summer's NYC Restaurant Week, read on.

Enjoy fine dining and High Line views at Danny Meyer's restaurant at the Whitney Museum. PROVIDED

Fung Tu x Russ & Daughters PROVIDED

Felidia

Lidia Bastianich's classic Italian spot is anything but stuck in time. This dynamic little restaurant on the northeastern edge of Midtown remains a gem in the city's dining scene, turning out the kind of Italian fare that both comforts and surprises. 243 E. 58th St.

Untitled

Danny Meyer's glass-walled fine-dining restaurant at the new Whitney Museum is an attraction unto itself. Particularly gorgeous during sunset and twilight, reserve a table during dinner service after a day of absorbing modern art and High Line views and settle in for some tomato and peach gazpacho and roasted sea bass (among other options). 99 Gansevoort St.

Le Coq Rico

This outstanding heritage-chicken spot is not usually within mere mortals' price range, but during NYC Restaurant Week you can have a quarter of the 120-day chicken and the coveted L'lle Flottante dessert. They're only serving lunch, but resist the urge to turn it into a business meeting; you'll want to savor every bite. 30 E. 20th St.

Chez Josephine

Find all the ambiance of 1930s France right in the heart of the city. This classic restaurant is serving its steak au poivre on both the lunch and dinner menus, plus those escargots you keep meaning to try but chicken out of. Live a little! 414 W. 42nd St.

Schilling

This Financial District gem is still largely undiscovered, which should change. Chef Eduard Frauneder puts a Mediterranean flair on classic Austrian dishes, creating tastes that taste authentic without the heaviness of Central European food. We're partial to the lunchtime offering of wiener schnitzel, but the grilled salmon at dinner sounds promising, too. 109 Washington St.

Fung Tu

Never one to do the same thing for very long, Fung Tu chef Jonathan Wu has teamed up with his Lower East Side neighbor Russ & Daughters for some Restaurant Week-only collaboration dishes with Jewish and Chinese influences, like Smoked Sable Bao and Scallion Pancakes with Kippered Salmon. It's only served during dinner, and only until Aug. 6! 22 Orchard St.

How to choose a college major that you'll love

Step #2: Test out the waters.

SARA FEINSTEIN
@SaraBFeinstein
sara.feinstein@metro.us

If you ask any student what they plan to study in college, you're likely to induce a full-blown panic attack.

Considering the array of options, and the fact that many students believe their major is an exact determinant of where they'll end up, narrowing down on one area is oftentimes the biggest challenge. But it doesn't have to be.

We spoke with College Board's director of student communications, Andrew Elwell for some tips on how to pick a major — without the panic.

Get advice

Between guidance counselors and academic advisers, students have plenty of people to turn to for career guidance. At the end of the day, "these are professionals who have helped countless students before you navigate the same questions of what they want to study in college," says Elwell. They probably have ideas for things that you might want to pursue."

Friends and family are also great sources to tap into, he explains. "They know a lot about you, and might have insights that you haven't even thought of, so just sort of talk to them about your [potential] major and see what they have to say."

Explore your options

The best thing for students to do is test out the waters before they declare, says Elwell. For high school students, that means making it a point to sign up for AP classes. If you're interested in computer science, take AP computer science principles, says the expert. "You're going to get a better sense of whether that's a field that you ultimately want to pursue in college."

College students should also get their feet wet, he explains. Because most schools don't require them to declare a major until the end of their sophomore year, those first two years are the perfect time to explore new interests. "And you never know. That interesting class description that you saw in the course catalog might turn out to be your college major."

Do your research

The internet is a great place to begin learning about different majors, and College Board's "Big Future" tool is a smart place to start. Students can plug in keywords to find specific courses that might be helpful for certain majors, and even watch videos from other students who had to navigate the same situation.

Perhaps even more helpful, however, is exploring leaders in a career path you're con-

Kyrie Irving to Knicks trade might not pan out if KP is wanted

The Cavaliers' star guard wants out of Cleveland and listed MSG as one of his landing spots. But a deal to New York might not work out.

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

If New York Knicks fans wanted a little relief from the Carmelo Anthony trade saga, they received it over the weekend when Cleveland Cavaliers All-Star point guard Kyrie Irving informed his team that he wanted to be traded this summer.

His destinations of preference? The San Antonio Spurs, Minnesota Timberwolves, Miami Heat ... and New York Knicks.

Forget newly-drafted 18-year-old Frenchman Frank Ntilikina, roll out the red carpet for New York's best point guard since Walt Frazier in the 25-year-old, 2016 NBA-champion Irving. He put up the best season of his career last year, averaging 25.2 points and 5.8 assists per game; numbers that haven't been seen in the Knicks' backcourt in decades.

This almost seems too good to be true, honestly. The Knicks have an All-Star of their own, although an aging one, that they want to deal in Anthony and he has said in the past that he's willing to waive his no-trade clause to go to either the Houston Rockets or Cavaliers.

Of course, though, things like this don't just work out that way for the Knicks.

If the Cavaliers' asking price for Kyrie Irving is too high and includes Kristaps Porzingis, there is no way the Knicks will get the talented point guard. GETTY IMAGES

There is a possibility that the Cavaliers would forego a pursuit of Anthony and instead inquire about Kristaps Porzingis, the future of the Knicks' franchise. It has been reported though that Porzingis is rightfully not available in any kind of trade talks, which is a stark contrast from about a month ago when Phil Jackson was still running the show.

While his name hasn't cropped up in trade talks, young center Willy Hernangomez is another asset the Knicks might not want to part with, either.

If Cleveland is hell-bent on getting either of those players, no way will Irving be wearing blue and orange next year.

However, should the Knicks package Anthony up with a couple first-round draft picks, you could actually see one of the best point guards in basketball call Madison Square Garden home.

Yo's comments latest in Mets' humiliation

The oft-injured Mets slugger found himself in hot water after saying he wanted to finish his career with the Oakland Athletics.

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Dysfunctionality has become so commonplace during the New York Mets' 2017 season that nothing should really come as a surprise anymore.

Yoenis Cespedes, who has had a miserable season by his standards thanks to injuries, was the latest to try the patience of those around the organization with comments made to the San Francisco Chronicle prior to the Mets' series against the Oakland Athletics:

"I still love the A's. They were the first team to give me an opportunity to play in the big leagues. I love Oakland all the time... I told (Mets reliever Jerry) Blevins, 'I don't know how many years I'm going to play, but I'm going to play the last year of my career with Oakland.' I don't know if that's possible or not, but that's my goal."

He also went on to say that Athletics manager Bob Melvin has been "the best manager for me so far."

Nothing like showing confidence in your own team and manager after signing a four-year, $110 million contract over the winter, which has locked Cespedes up in Mets' pinstripes until he is 35 years old.

Cespedes spent the first two-plus seasons of his career with the Athletics after defecting from Cuba. He hit 66 home runs in 365 games with the team before he was dealt to the Boston Red Sox at the trade deadline in 2014.

After short stints in Boston and with the Detroit Tigers, Cespedes arrived in New York at the 2015 deadline where his career reached new heights. He answered a 35-home run 2015 campaign that ended with a trip to the World Series with 31 home runs and a second-career All-Star Game appearance.

Yoenis Cespedes gushed about his former team, the Oakland Athletics, on Friday night. GETTY IMAGES

But this season has been a nightmare for the 31-year-old, who has constantly battled hamstring injuries due to the ineptitude of the Mets' training staff. Missing 45 of his team's first 95 games of the season, Cespedes has just nine home runs and 22 RBI.

During such a difficult season, it's concerning to hear him talk about playing for other teams given his importance to the Mets' immediate future, though he did attempt to backtrack after Friday night's game by saying New York was his home and the Mets are his team.

Regardless, this is just another embarrassing storyline at the end of the day for an organization that has been humiliated time and time again this season.
